

Jessica could delegate tasks more so that the project is clearer to her teammates and so that she does not end up taking on so much of the project alone. She does well judging the time that it will take her to get things done and delivers tasks on time.

Hyungie could be clearer about changing the location and format of code. She does well refactoring and making code and documentation readable and presentable.

Nick could use his teammates better as resources when he runs into a problem in his part of the code, particularly when the group is working together physically. He does well working on various parts of the project and is always willing to take on a new task.